We have heard many compliments on the portraits that we displayed in our window the past week. When may we make your picture?

F. W. DAVIS, Proprietor.

THE DEATH OF A GRAND OLD MAN

News of the death of Hon. Wm. R. Edgar, which occurred on Tuesday, Sept. 27th, at his home in Ironton, will be received with deepest regret by the many friends throughout the State of this excellent and exceptional gentleman, who has for many years been recognized as one of the truly big men of this State. He belonged to the old school of politicians, who were also gentlemen and statesmen, under whose wise guidance the best interests of the Democratic party, to which he was a steadfast adherent, was always the one chief idea. Col. Edgar was for many years a close personal friend and co-worker of such men as Senators Vest and Cockrill, Stone and Clardy, and it is doubtful if he was ever absent from a Democratic State convention. But not only as a politician did he rank high in this State. He was generally in the forefront of things generally, and was looked upon to lead by a host of devoted followers.

Deceased was 70 years old when death claimed him. The funeral services were held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, conducted by the Masonic fraternity, of which Col. Edgar was a member in good standing. It was one of the most largely attended funerals ever held in Ironton.

PUBLIC SCHOOL NOTES

Some four or five cases of diphtheria developed in the district last week and materially reduced the attendance at school in the lower grades. Conditions have much improved this week, only one new case having been reported. The local physicians, the parents of the children affected, and the teachers have worked harmoniously together in an effort to control the disease. No further spread of the contagion is anticipated.

A few cases of scarlet fever were noted at the Presbyterian Home last week-end and the entire institution promptly quarantined merely as a matter of precaution. The Home is very carefully and scientifically managed, and all sick children are assigned to their own special hospital provided on the grounds for that purpose. The close isolation of the infected children will soon, no doubt, result in freeing the Home from infection. During the absence of the Home children from school they are provided, within the Home with daily instruction by competent instructors and will not be seriously retarded by their enforced absence.

Thirty-two of the leading business firms of Farmington, including the three banks, have agreed to close their places of business from 3:30 until 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon, in order to attend, and to allow their help to attend, the game of foot ball between Farmington High School and Perryville High School that will be played on the local athletic field at that time. In the past many of the games have been played on Saturday afternoon when the rush of business in Farmington at that time made it impossible for the business men generally to attend. The spirit of co-operation between the athletic management and the business men is very commendable. Captain Baugh has assured the local boys that he will head a stronger team than met our boys last year, and we recollect very definitely that they had no ordinary team at that time. It will be a great game.

On last Saturday afternoon the Farmington H. S. team met the Desloge H. S. team on the National Park in Desloge and defeated them by the score of 20 to 0. The game was really more closely contested than the score indicates, and the Desloge aggression shows much evidence of careful training, and latent strength that will become available as the season advances. Andrew McCoy was clearly the star of the Desloge team, while Simms was the outstanding ground gainer for Farmington and out kicked his heavy opponent from Desloge on every point. The other backfield men, Harry K. Denman, Ted Graves and E. J. McKinney, all showed to good advantage in carrying the ball and breaking up the opponent's plays. Ed Garner, at left tackle, and George Dettling at center, did some excellent work and the failure of Desloge to score was hindered largely by the steady work of that duo. Leonard Marbury, who played the last three quarters, displayed unusual speed and ability for a new man. All of the boys showed up as well as could be expected on account of the excessive heat, and the fact that it was the first game of the season. Farmington had a fine group of substitutes on the sideline, many of whom will be given experience before the close of the season.

The girls' basketball season will open on Friday night, Sept. 30th, when our girls will play the Desloge girls on the Desloge court in their new high school building. The Farmington girls are working earnestly under the coaching of Miss Huss and they hope to be able to hold their own this year against any county contenders. The girls and their coach will sincerely appreciate the interest and co-operation of parents and the public to make the season a great success. It has been pointed out that a greater interest in high school athletics by the public generally will do much to curtail those forms of questionable recreation that often appeal to young folks of high school age. The thought is well worth considering by all in the community that have the well being of young people at heart. Come out and encourage our young folks in clean, vigorous athletics.
